

Standardized Work

Do pending retirements have you concerned that tribal knowledge will walk out the door?

Will getting new employees up to speed faster improve your profits?

Will pending retirements in the next few years put your business at risk?

Is knowledge being efficiently and effectively transferred to new workers?

Standardized Work is the foundation for improvement efforts. Working with WMEP to document your current best practices using Standardized Work will help your company ensure all processes are well sequenced, organized, and repeatedly followed correctly. Standardized Work will help your company proactively improve your training methods by setting a standard that will improve quality and reduce waste due to variation. Employees will feel more engaged and have a better understanding of what is expected of them.

Standardized Work benefits include:

- Increase in process predictability and measurement of results
- Reducing errors so management has more time for strategic objectives
- Proactively addressing the looming retirement bubble
- Lessen the impact of loss of employees

Without process documentation, manufacturers find themselves in constant struggle as their most knowledgeable employees leave. Standardized Work is far more than just documenting, it allows a company to have the necessary training tools to ensure a proper transition between employees.

WMEP offers a variety of services to address your pressing people issues from Front Line Leader Skill Development to Leadership Training and Coaching to Strategic Workforce Planning to Employee Engagement Analysis to Retention Value Analysis.

It's as simple as a conversation with a WMEP business development expert who will work with you to determine the right path toward maximizing the impact on your business.
